What they Provide:	C.A.R.E. Services Trust is an information and advocacy service for children up to the age of 16. It is a free service and they provide support for the whole family and services relating to any type or level of impairment which may be sensory, intellectual, physical, psychiatric or neurological. Some of the services provided are:

- Family Support Service
- A support worker can talk to you in your own home or any preferred location
- Information about services available in the community
- Referral to other services
- Assist with co-ordination of the services you might need or want
- Advocacy to assist and support you in your dealings with agencies or individuals
- Needs Assessments contracted to Disability Support Link for children and youth.

They aim to provide a service focused on family strengths and wishes and to provide a service which is sensitive to families' cultural needs. The Service acts in a way that assists families to strengthen and develop their support networks and will respect family and client rights.

Organisation: The McKenzie Centre

Address: 30 Hammond Street, Hamilton

Website: www.mckenziecentre.org.nz

What they Provide: Early intervention for children with special needs. At the centre they use a transdisciplinary approach to intervention. In this approach the family is on the team and involved at every stage. Every family has a key worker. Referrals are accepted directly from families or agencies and children can attend from birth, or at diagnosis, to school age who have delays in their development or are at risk of development delays. This could include children with intellectual, physical, communication and /or sensory disabilities, as well as those children with delays although no specific disability can be identified. Staff consist of an Assistive Technology Specialist, Early Intervention Teachers, Occupational Therapists, Physiotherapist, Psychologist, Social Worker, Speech Language Therapists and Education Support Workers.
